On a warm day in May, Alice and her cat rest under the shade of a tree. Alice falls asleep and dreams that she is cat. This is the beginning of a wonderful adventure in which our protagonist guided by her curiosity, travels across a land full of charming characters and fabulous landscapes, where she will finally find herself. Based on the novel "Alice's adventures in wonderland" by Lewis Carroll and the Taoist parable of Chuang Tzu "The butterfly dream" this story seeks to provide a new look from a philosophical point of view to this classic of literature.

"I have a box full of treasures." Treasures that the protagonists of this story are finding on their excursions, on their walks, at their destination. Little wonders that hide secrets such as a dried rose, crystal stones, variously shaped sticks or a tiny pencil ... The two children in this story know that the most authentic treasures are hidden in the experiences they live at every step, and they know also that there is a greater treasure that does not fit in any box...

"This is Honorato. Do not look for a trunk, it is a cat ... Chubby and flat. And this is his story". This book is different. Different for its humor. For its rhythm. For its vocabulary and musicality. And for his illustrations. It tells the story in verse, and with hilarious humor, of a cat named Honorato who loves to eat... all day. His roommates, Torcuato and Viriato, advise him to stop eating so much... and he will end up paying attention to them. Or not?
